

I saw a story on the news today about cell phone portability for the phone numbers that cell phone users have. I can't express how much I support this idea. I feel it will make the cell phone service industry a much better consumer related field. As it is now, the industry is pathetic with customer relations and actual care about their clients. They know that the people won't leave their service for another provider because they don't want to lose the phone number. I feel that if the customer had the option to keep the number, that would make the providers much more willing to provide better, more reliable service.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions relating to this, I can't express how much I support this notion.

Scott Hultgren
760.744.6949